An-erpositionisadangerousplacetobe. Mere attitudinal- or demographic-only segmentation approaches could have identified target market customers, but they would not have provided any insights into customer needs in ways that would help the company improve the product and contribute to building the brand identity. Age and income cannot help you fully anticipate and satisfy emotional needs. The managers of great brands actually actively segment the market and seek out only those whose natural brand affinity makes them ideal customers.
