I stood at the corner of the rice-field, if she noticed me, it was known only to her. The Summer will come in its time, sailing in the flood-tide of the south wind. The herd boy who grazes his cattle sitting under the banyan tree, and idly weaves gunja flowers into garlands, who loves to splash and plunge in the Jamuna's cool deep stream. O poet, set up your house in this land. View other formats and editions. Tears flow from my eyes, let them flow round your feet in worship.
