Description Contents Detailed info Author bio Description This book offers an historical portrait of the first generations of women home scientists at the University of New Zealand in the early decades of the twentieth century. Over the past two decades feminist history has turned attention to the development of more transnational approaches Curthoys and Lake, Amherst, N. Those who graduated with a home science qualification from the University of Otago assumed a diverse range of roles within and outside the field of household science.
